The study of communication is one of the oldest and most contemporary fields. Communication majors examine questions about society, communication, and persuasion in ways that combine the best of the ancient liberal arts tradition with critical attention to the newest media technologies. Our faculty offer diverse perspectives on the role of communication, media, and rhetoric in our lives through courses such as persuasion, argument, interpersonal communication, political rhetoric, rhetoric of science, nonverbal communication, history of media, media criticism, and television and society.

Many of the Department of Communication's graduates hold important positions in industry, education, media, government, law, and other professions. An understanding of communication as a human activity, makes the department's graduates attractive candidates when seeking employment or obtaining admission to graduate programs.

Grade requirements: A grade of C or better is required in each course that is to count toward the major. A minimum GPA of 2.0 in departmental courses is required for graduation.

Satisfactory/No Credit option: No course that counts toward the major can be taken on an S/NC basis without the approval of the COMMRC advisor.

Writing (W) requirement: Students must complete at least one W-course in the major.

Related area: A minimum of 12 credits is required in any one Arts and Sciences department chosen in consultation with the major advisor. The completion of an official Arts and Sciences minor or an Arts and Sciences or UCIS certificate also satisfies this requirement.

Internships: The Department of Communication keeps a large file of undergraduate internship opportunities in a variety of communication related fields. Most students find internships at local radio and television stations, nonprofit agencies, and local businesses. We also list available positions related to event planning, marketing, public relations, promotions, advertising, and journalism. Many of our students choose to Intern for credit, which requires them to attend three two-hour meetings of the Communication Internship Seminar over the duration of the semester. Each intern will complete a Department of Communication Internship Agreement form.
